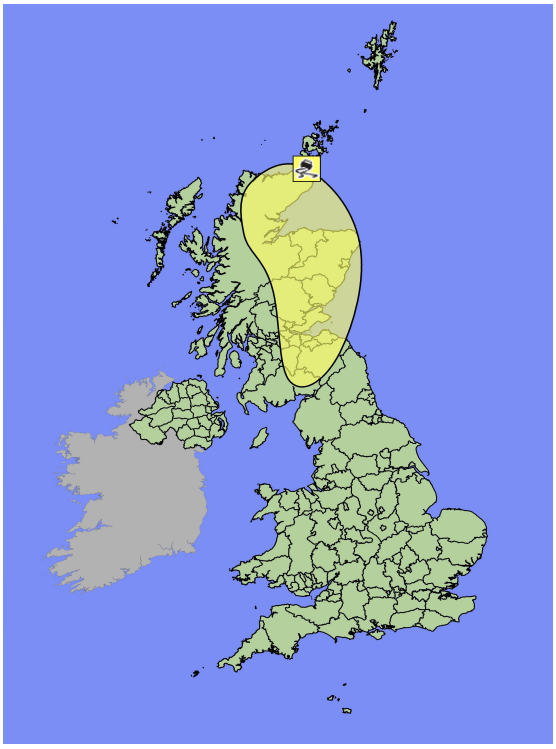
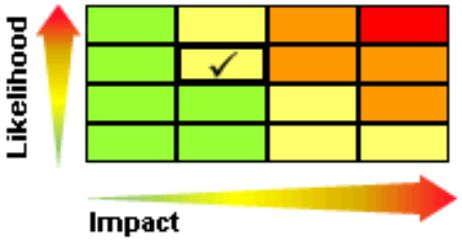
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow will continue to move away south to leave clearing skies across all parts by evening. A frost will develop quickly after dark allowing surfaces left wet from earlier precipitation to freeze and widespread ice to form on untreated surfaces. Scattered sleet and snow showers are also expected to continue to affect northern and eastern coasts.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 19:00 on Tue, 03rd Apr 2012 until 09:00 on Wed, 04th Apr 2012

Widespread ice is expected to form on untreated surfaces this evening and overnight. The public should be aware of possible travel disruption.
In addition, there will be further snow showers mainly over Grampian and Border Regions giving further slight accumulations of snow, mostly over higher ground.
